M. Kent Stroman : Asking about Asking: Mastering the Art of Conversational Fundraising before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Asking about Asking: Mastering the Art of Conversational Fundraising:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. very detailed and helpful outline of donor decision making processBy Keir R. Johnson"The Ask" is too often treated like a mystical event. This book, while a bit disorganized, breaks down the evaluation and decision making process most donors need to go through. The central premise, that gift officers don't need to (and shouldn't) guess or assume what is important to the donors they are working with, is refreshing. I see too much "spray and pray" style communication. Donors don't always know what they want, we need to ask perceptive questions, listen, provide examples, and listen a lot more. The stair cultivation stair step is worth the price of the book. For mgo's not currently using a gift proposal, the template is a bonus. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Fundraising via Cultivating Relationships vs. Giving a Sales Pitch By Deborah D Fesler The insights that Kent Stroman shared in this book were immensely helpful for my husband and I as we were raising funds to serve in a non-profit Christian ministry. We began to pursue our fundraising from a donor perspective rather than just from our own perspective. This book helped us to see that rather than just following our own agenda for asking for financial support, we needed to focus on building the relationship to find out what motivates the donor to give and what they want to accomplish with their donor dollars. Our support appointments became conversations about giving rather than merely coming across as "sales pitches". This book is a must read for anyone seeking to cultivate relationships with donors that will stick with you for years to come! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Move Quickly to Asking Success By John FM This is an excellent book, full of practical advice for moving the cultivation process forward with donors. Each step of the staircase is essential in order to get to major gift success. It is also an easy read, so it is a perfect desktop companion for quick reference later.

What gets in the way of your face-to-face fundraising? Can't get in to see a funder? Don't know who to ask? No time for donor calls? Fear that your prospective donor might say no?
