Kate Dossett : Bridging Race Divides: Black Nationalism, Feminism, and Integration in the United States, 1896-1935 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Bridging Race Divides: Black Nationalism, Feminism, and Integration in the United States, 1896-1935:

African American women in the early-twentieth century made significant contributions toward the development of a black feminist tradition, were at the forefront of black nationalism, and challenged the apparent dichotomy between black nationalism and integrationism. Kate Dossett examines the political thought and cultural production of prominent black women leaders in the years between the founding of the National Association of Colored Women in 1896 and the National Council of Negro Women in 1935.

"Bridging Race Divides breaks new ground in African American and women's history by challenging assumptions about African American women's relationship to black nationalist movements in the United States" - Sarah Judson, University of North Carolina, Asheville"About the AuthorKate Dossett is a lecturer in North American history at the University of Leeds.
