in business for God's glory. I was looking for a book like this for a while until I saw it at a pastors house after having discussed a few business ideas. It has opened my eyes and shown me that you can still do business and spread the good news at the same time. I can't wait to get started. It's good that I am seeing this before I get started. I also like the fact that it shows different kinds of businesses at different levels in different settings. Be blessed Doug!

By Craig Hardee
This is the story of Partners Worldwide, a Christian ministry which seeks to link North American businessmen with entrepreneurs in Africa, Asia and Latin America. They partner together to find solutions for economic growth that restore hope and dignity to people around the world. The book begins by talking about the vision for Partners Worldwide and how the ministry got started. The real strength of the book comes after that, as the authors tell stories of the vision of the ministry being carried out. Stories from entrepreneurs in Kenya, Nicaragua, Uganda, Haiti, The Philippines, Zambia and North America are shared with honesty, the successes as well as failures being discussed. But the book shows the overall concept of the ministry's vision is workable and works well in many situations. The book ends with a discussion on how to make your business your mission with more information being shared about Partners Worldwide. Partners Worldwide is the publisher of this book and I was not familiar with this ministry before reading this book. I purchased the book after it was recommended by a friend. If you want to be jolted out of "business as usual" and how you can use your business in an innovative way to make an impact worldwide, then this book is for you!

Great examples of actual ventures that have successfully impacted the needy in different countries. The book helps vision building to put into action inspirations and ideas that businessmen and churches alike share. A fun and easy read filled with practical ideas.

My Business, My Mission tells the story of a movement that is changing the lives of tens of thousands of people in the most impoverished nations on earth. It is also transforming business people in the northern and southern hemispheres by exposing them to a revolutionary paradigm: the idea that God has called them into mission through business. Through the work of a remarkable organization called Partners Worldwide, North American businesspeople and entrepreneurs in developing countries are joining together to fight poverty. Their mission is simple: to expand their businesses, create wealth, and provide jobs for the poor in Christ's name.
