LabrancheI have been following the young author's blog (now 10-year-old Martha Payne, with her dad's input) about her school lunches served in Scotland. She invited guest writers from schools all over the world to contribute photos and ratings of their own school lunches, from Texas to Japan. The realization that some kids don't get lunch at all sparked a movement to raise money for Mary's Meals, a foundation that provides nourishing meals to children in Malawi. Martha describes her adventures, capping it all with a trip to Malawi with her family to see the new kitchen that was built with her efforts and those of many. The photos are terrific, and I was touched by the stories of many kids - like the students in New Zealand who made gallons of lemonade to raise money. It's funny and captivating. This was the best gift I could have given this Christmas. If ordering in the USA shipping takes a while since it is printed in the UK. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Well done, Martha and Dave! By D. Clark I have been following Martha's blog, NeverSeconds, since she began it. This wonderful book tells all the back-story, and also contains the blog entries. Kudos to a brave girl and her supportive dad! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great story By RALI've been following this story online for some time when I seen this book, it allowed be to share it with other not online. And at the same time help out Mary's Meals.

Martha Payne is nine years old. She set up a simple blog, neverseconds, where she reviewed her school lunches and talked about healthy eating for children. She hoped to raise a few hundred pounds for her favorite charity, Mary's Meals. After 7 million blog hits, one council-led banning, being the number one story on every news site worldwide, and having raised over 115,000 for Mary's Meals, Martha is one of the biggest news stories of the year. Endorsed by Jamie Oliver and Nick Nairn, her story is extraordinary the little girl who changed lives in Africa, stood up to the government, and won the hearts of people all over the world. Find out the real story of the blog, what happened behind the scenes, learn all about Martha's trip to Malawi, and how her work is changing the lives of children there. Every copy sold provides 25 school dinners for children in Malawi through a donation to Mary's Meals. Find out about the most inspirational story of the year and help the fight to end hunger in Malawi.

About the Author Martha Payne, better known as Veg of the blog neverseconds, is the nine year old author, and is assisted by David Payne, her father.
