The harshness of the Australian frontier is brought into vivid detail with this collection of diaries and letters from women living in the Outback. Their inspiring accounts, framed by contextual and biographical commentary, unveil the rawness, solitude, and intensity of the pioneers existence. Full of passion, pleasure, pain, and loss, this anthology will both captivate and demystify the stereotypical ideas of bush life.

About the Author Lucy Frost is a professor of English at the University of Tasmania and the coauthor of Those Women Who Go to Hotels.
