Bev Ashman : Person-centred Active Support: A handbook before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Person-centred Active Support: A handbook:

This handbook provides a thorough introduction to the practice and implementation of person-centred active support for people with learning disabilities. Utilising examples, tools and experiences from a range of organisations and services, it provides the reader with additional information on a range of implementation issues. It also provides examples and suggestions to help successfully support people to participate in meaningful activities and relationships.
