ArchaeologyBy MischiefThis is a wonderful book with short summaries of many archaeologists over the centuries and of the sites where they worked and examples of what they found and why it was significant. It is designed for a person seeking general knowledge such as myself so I can get a clearer picture of what happened to the ancients, their achievements and what they left for us and the time periods when all this occurred. That is a most difficult extended history to streamline.1 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Be carefulBy kriosLike other 500-page Lorenz encyclopedias, this one is a combination of 2 earlier 250-page books. One was by Catlin, the other was written by Paul Bahn.

This book is a hands-on resource for the amateur, student or volunteer as well as a reference for those interested in the world's greatest archaeological finds and the people who discovered them. Features how-to photographic sequences of field surveys and step-by-step excavations, plus guidance on handling and recording finds and dating artefacts

About the AuthorChristopher Catling writes for the Institute of Field Archaeology, the Society of Antiquaries, and English Heritage, and is the Vice-Chairman of Cotswolds Archaeology. He is also an established travel writer. Paul Bahn is a writer, editor and translator of books on archaeology. He studied archaeology at the University of Cambridge and has held post-doctoral fellowships at Liverpool and London, plus a J. Paul Getty fellowship in the History of Art and the Humanities.
